Ten ever-lovin' blue-eyed years with Pogo, 1949-1959 Walt Kelly

New York: Simon & Schuster, 1959. 288pp: Walt Kelly's own survey of the best of Pogo from the first syndicated strips in 1949. Richly illustrated of course, with memoirs by Kelly stitching the strips together. This is the paperback but from the hardback dustjacket comes this quote: "Here is a book bursting with those things which the publishers firmly believe go to make up real American humor: gentleness, compassion, perception, guts and anger. The words, both funny and angry (25,000 new ones), and the collection of cartoons (many never before in book form) from the past ten years give a candid look beneath the skin of a nation involved in the adolescent pain of growing up. The author is an uncanny observer of the overlooked obvious, with a command of words and ideas to match the skill of his brush. His work is seasoned with a pinch of hindsight, the punch of foresight and a boatload of insight. It's good for what ails us, and fun to take."
