Two Worlds (The Bhesar Trilogy Book 1) George Ellis

(Book 1 of the Bhesar Trilogy - Recommended for readers in Grade 8 and above)

Best friends Eugene and Brianna are students at the prestigious Bhesar Institute, where only the cream of the crop are chosen to enter and become the community's elite warriors. Eugene specializes in telepathy, and Brianna, camouflage. They are two of the institute's top first-year students; none of the other first-years are as gifted.

Except for Wen, that is--the handsome, gifted, and sometimes arrogant student who specializes in both telepathy and camouflage. What's worse, his best friend Ruben is also a gifted student, nicknamed The Scholar by none other than the Master of the Institute himself.

Grudgingly, the girls team up with the boys to learn more about the Circle, Bhesar's secret that has been kept hidden for hundreds of years. Their curiosity is piqued even further when they find out it is a doorway into the unknown. But their curiosity soon turns to fear when they discover that something dwells on the other side of the Circle . . .

The Beings are coming. And they want something from their world.

(Two Worlds is a 55,000-word novel)
