The Army Air Forces in World War II Volume Five The Pacific: Matterhorn to Nagasaki June 1944 to August 1945 W.F. and Cate, J.L. (Ed.) Craven

This book is part of a seven volume history of the Air Force during World War II. Like all history, THE ARMY AIR FORCES IN WORLD WAR II reflects the era when it was conceived, researched and written. The strategic bombing campaigns revealed the primary emphasis, not only because of a widely shared belief in bombardment's contribution to victory, but also because of its importance in establishing the United States Air Force as a military service independent of the Army. The Focus of Volume five is the Pacific Theatre. It covers the time period of June 1944 to August 1945 - from the Matterhorn to Nagasaki
