At Rosemary's private boarding school for girls in the early 1940's, young Kate boldly confesses her love to her roommate Anne. The timing is off as Anne's father takes ill that night and her mother forces her to return home in hopes it will help make him well. Neither of the girls expect to see each other again but life works as it does. Soon they find themselves rooming together again, like before, though a lot has changed and there are many words left to be spoken.
